Unveiling the Lost Voices

Who are these forgotten poets, whose names have been erased from the annals of literary history? They come from all walks of life, from humble scribes to forgotten scholars, from anonymous street poets to aspiring young writers. Their backgrounds may be diverse, but they share a common thread: their passion for the written word.

Some, like the 17th-century poet Anne Bradstreet, were silenced by the societal constraints of their time. Others, like the 19th-century African American poet Phillis Wheatley, faced the prejudices of a racially divided society. Still others, like the enigmatic Emily Dickinson, chose to live in relative seclusion, leaving behind a legacy of poems that were published posthumously.

Rediscovering Hidden Masterpieces

Despite the obstacles they faced, these forgotten poets have left behind a wealth of poetic treasures. Their verses are rich in imagery, emotion, and insight, offering a glimpse into the human condition that transcends the boundaries of time and circumstance.

Here are a few examples of forgotten poems that captivate with their beauty and depth:

- "On My First Son" by Ben Jonson (1572-1637):

*Farewell, thou child of my right hand, and joy;
My sin was too much hope of thee, loved boy.
Seven years thou wert lent to me, and I thee pay,
Exacted by thy fate, on the just day.*

*O, could I lose all father now! But that's not possible, so a kiss, adieu;
I cannot look on thee, who now knows all.*

- "A Valediction: Forbidding Mourning" by John Donne (1572-1631):

*As virtuous men pass mildly away,
And whisper to their souls to go,
While some of their sad friends do say,
The breath goes now, and some say, no.
So let us melt, and make no noise,
No tear-floods, nor sigh-tempests move;
'Twere profanation of our joys
To tell the laity our love.*

- "The Raven" by Edgar Allan Poe (1809-1849):

*Once upon a midnight dreary, while I pondered, weak and weary,
Over many a quaint and curious volume of forgotten lore—
When the nights were long and cold, and the days were short and old,
And the fire burned low and the wind blew cold,
And the snow fell fast and the ice grew bold,
And the raven sat upon the bust of Pallas just above my door,
Quoth the raven, "Nevermore."*
